The retail industry should be prepared for changing economic conditions in the coming year. The economy slowed last year, with real GDP growth declining to 1.9 percent in Q3 from 3.1 percent in Q1. With the outlook for global growth dimming and the uncertainty of trade tariffs unlikely to go away soon, we expect real GDP growth to slow to 1.6 percent this year from 2.3 percent in 2019.

27.2 About Manufacturing and Distribution Environments. Today's customer-driven manufacturing strategies require flexible manufacturing and distribution systems. The following graphic shows manufacturing and distribution environments that vary along a continuum from discrete, low-volume production of customized designs to process, high-volume production of commodities.

Overview to Manufacturing and Distribution Environments

Manufacturing supply chains usually have longer end-to-end lead times (due to manufacturing process lead times) and therefore inherently less flexible to volatility. Retail chains can be nimble if managed and modeled well though the size of these chains tends to make them harder to optimize. Capacity Constraints:
